

Editorial

The editors of FULL are pleased to announce the first issue of the second volume of the journal. Our journal is meant to provide a platform for linguistic research on modern and older Finno-Ugric or other Uralic languages and dialects, comparative research as well as research on single languages, with comparison of just Finno-Ugric languages or comparison across family lines, with formally or empirically oriented papers. The present issue contains three papers, one historical-comparative, and two dealing with syntactic constructions in individual languages. We hope you will find them interesting and useful.

We wish to thank all the anonymous reviewers who generously lent their time and expertise to make sure that each submission is carefully vetted and fairly assessed. Their constructive criticism helped improve each of the contributions that appear in the present issue as well. Our special thanks go to Orsolya Tánzos, whose dedicated and painstaking editorial assistance has made the editing of this issue possible.

A small announcement is in order regarding the journal's online access system, which we have modified so that now all papers can be freely accessed and downloaded without any need for prior registration. At the same time, those who register, or have already registered, are provided with the benefit of getting notified of new issues, calls, etc. via the occasional email.

FULL welcomes manuscripts from all the main branches of linguistics, including phonology, morphology, syntax, semantics and pragmatics, diachronic or synchronic, as well as from first language acquisition and psycholinguistics. Whatever the theoretical or empirical orientation of the contributions may be, our leading principle is to maintain the highest international standards.
